

tall and open onto little balconies like French doors.

In the narrow streets of the old part of the city where we found the ~~most~~ ^{most} interesting sights. The people are dressed in long skirts with immaculate white blouses and long dark shawls. Monkey carts horse drawn vehicles and even oxen are frequently seen. A box of Ritz Crackers would look like home but the price on it would look like this 27 $ 50. To a Portuguese it would mean 27 escudos (their dollar) and 50 centavos. 100 centavos make an escudo. Translated into our money it would be $1.10. Brazilian American things are really high. The streets are all paved with cobblestones black and white. Most of both streets & sidewalks
